what is dye-sublimation

The advantages of dye-sublimation printing cannot be overstated and if you're new to this technology then here's what you should know. Compared to traditional wide-format inkjet printing this modern technology means you can create vivid, long-life and colour-fast displays and signage relatively quickly and cost effectively.

The process by which dye-sublimation is applied means you get high definition results while maintaining fabric integrity. You can achieve continuous tone and near-photographic images that become part of the material itself, resulting in a flawless and smooth surface.

Your graphics are safe because they are permanently embedded through the dye-sublimation process regardless of the fabric you choose.

Fabrics can include poly-poplin, satin, outdoor flag cloth, poly-knit, taffeta, sheer, chiffon, poly-silk, dacron, gaming suede, poly-dick, spun-poly, mesh and more recently, carpet.

There is no creasing or cracking to the graphics when folding your fabric. They are washable without risk and won't curl at the edges. Moreover, they are free from any glare as they have a smooth and non-glossy finish making them perfect for both indoor and outdoor applications or in highly lit areas.

The dye-sublimation printing method can be applied to outdoor flags, exhibition graphics and portable displays. And when applied to tension fabric exhibition systems your visual impact and ability to attract customers to your display is far superior to that of traditional printing methods.

The best part, however, is the eco-friendly nature of this process. It uses water-based dyes, which means that no Volatile Organic Compounds (VOC's) are produced like you would get from solvent-based inks and so there are no nasty vapours escaping into the atmosphere.

In addition, there is no waste making its way into our waterways as there is no water used in the printing process thus also saving water under dye-sublimation printing. And with no water in the process, prints are dry and ready to use as soon as they exit the printer in contrast to the energy-soaking heaters that traditional printing methods use to dry materials.

From a technical standpoint, the sublimation process is not complex to set up or administer thereby allowing the convenience and advantage of mass production. From a scientific standpoint, the sublimation process uses heat and pressure to convert solid particles into a gaseous state without first forming a liquid.

These gas particles are embedded within your fabric when they return to a solid. The high temperature used in the process opens the pores of your fabric through which the dye moves in and the particles bond together.

Once cooled, the pores of the fabric close, the particles settle and they don't move or wash away. This physical reaction is named sublimation and when applied to the printing process is the technology of dye-sublimation printing.

We are happy to supply marketing collateral, imagery and display product for your use should you like to include these in product portfolios, presentations or in your "products" section of your website. We welcome opportunities for cobranding and are happy to offer our expertise and advice for pitches and sales documentation. Work with us to better understand your client base and their needs so we can recommend products that will appeal and add value.

We are often contacted directly by consumers wanting to purchase direct. Our preferred partners benefit from these queries as once these are identified as "non-trade", we pair them up with a partner who is geographically and specialization aligned and can facilitate the sale and delivery of our product.

To become an accredited client, just get in touch and we can set you up in an hour.

We prefer to produce our own products in-house to minimise carbon footprint, ensure materials are recycled where possible and that the manufacturing process is sustainably focused. But we also know that by being New Zealand made we can offer a service that our competitors simply can't.

At Textiles Alive we pride ourselves on our overnight proofing policy and our five-day lead time for many of our products. By keeping our manufacturing local we can deliver the best service, that is timely, personal and precise. It also means less room for error and a turnaround time international suppliers just can't compete with.

Where ever possible we also use local suppliers and partners to ensure our New Zealand made ethos permeates everything we do. It also means that we support other local businesses and pay it forward – just like many of you do.

We are a member of the NZ MADE organisation, showing our staunch support of our local manufacturing prowess and contribution to our economy. We are proud of our fair and diligent work ethic and our self-imposed high production standards.

Our products are proudly New Zealand made in our factory in the Bay of Plenty. By owning our manufacturing processes, we can ensure we deliver to shorter lead-times, offer overnight proofing, control the process and guarantee the outputs and quality. We also continue to provide jobs for New Zealanders and support the development of our local community.

We believe that technology is like rust, it never sleeps. It can often feel like you just master one machine and there is already a newer version on the market. Balancing the “newest and shiniest” with actual needs is important – it's hard not to get distracted!

But we've made a commitment to maintain our place in industry leadership and that means efficiency coupled with evolution. Technology and new machinery is a key contributor to this.

In the last year alone we have invested over $1 million to upgrade our printing, cutting and pressing machinery and in turn our processes and outputs. This significant investment has helped future-proof our business and ensure we have unmatched capacity, while maintaining the ability to deliver the bespoke or one-offs.

To house the new machinery we've increased the capacity of our factory. Our new facility covers over 17,000 square feet housing more than 25 pieces of capital equipment to deliver fabric imaging and finishing.

We continue our commitment to research and development and believe that the capacity, power and brilliance of our machines is still relatively untapped.

printing

Textiles Alive operates the largest fabric imaging plant in New Zealand. The custom-built facility spans more than 17,000 square feet and houses some of the largest and most advanced dye-sublimation fabric printing machines (source from Europe) in Australasia.

In the last 12 months, we've invested well over $1million in our machinery and now proudly house some of the most modern and capable dye-sublimation textile print machinery available world-wide. These machines have been chosen for their award-winning quality and reliability and of course their outputs.

The multiple state-of-the-art large format dye-sublimation printing production machines we own have a collective capacity to print 984sqm an hour in house. This equipment not only provides increased efficiency and volume, but also ensures that when it comes to image reproduction quality, there is no competition.

Our machines are aqueous-based and produce exceptional image reproduction through the dye-sublimation print process, dramatic four colour printing, deep colour saturation and wide colour gamut. They have ultra-high resolution, up to 2,400 dpi and four level greyscale printing with 4pL to 18pL drop sizes. Many of these machines are at 3200mm and 3400mm wide, meaning we are able to produce most available fabrics at 3200mm wide with no seam.

At Textiles Alive our sole focus is dye-sublimation printing, which we believe to be far superior to any other printing format utilised for mainstream fabric imaging today. Dye-Sublimation printing delivers high definition results while maintaining fabric integrity – the perfect mix of both art and science.

We begin the process by first printing on paper which is then pressed onto fabric by applying heat and pressure. Then the science kicks in, converting the ink to gas while the pores of the fabric open, allowing the fabric to absorb the ink. As the temperature drops these pores close, the ink then converts to a solid and the print is sealed into the fabric. Perfecting this process is an art, and one we think we've mastered.

In addition, our dye-sublimation machinery allows fabric to retain the drape and soft touch customers prefer. We can produce graphics that can be washed and dried without wrinkling, folded without leaving marks and then reused. The colour vibrancy is unmatched, with deeper and richer colour courtesy of our machines superior colour gamut.

The state-of-the-art pressing machines (source from Europe) have been designed specifically for pressing of high-end fabrics used in the fashion industry, internal furnishing and display fabrics. The uniformity of the end result and impressive colour reproduction is due to the exclusive method of heating the cylinders, with a patented design, that allows close and constant temperature control. This guarantees excellent print quality in terms of both uniformity and penetration of inks. The wide range of operating temperatures obtainable within the cylinders means that production can be altered to account for a wide range of substrates to ensure these are easily processed.

Our extensive experience in pressing means we are able to offer you sound advice and solutions based on your fabrics, whether they are woven, mono or bi-stretch fabrics, etc. We work best in collaboration so feel free to get in touch to discuss your options to achieve your desired outcome.

Textiles Alive operates the largest fabric imaging plant in New Zealand. The custom-built facility spans more than 17,000 square feet and houses some of the largest dye-sublimation fabric printing and pressing machines in Australasia.

In the last 12 months, we've invested well over $1million in our machinery and now proudly house some of the most modern and capable textile print and cutting machinery available world-wide. These machines have been chosen for their award-winning quality and reliability and of course their outputs.

With multiple state-of-the-art grand format dye-sublimation cutting production machines (source from Europe) we have the capacity to cut 562 lineal metres per hour in house. The machine allows an optimum use of printed fabrics due to a specially developed scanning system that scans the entire bed within 3 seconds before starting the cutting process. The feeder system advances the fabric, keeps it flat and eliminates waves on the surface. By limiting the operator's involvement we can warrant an accurate cut every time. The machine will also compensate automatically for shrinkage and distortion eliminating the need for manual measurements. Fabrics will be accurately cut on-size with sealed edges ensuring that there is no fraying as well as cut the contour of the image.

The machine boasts the largest automatic cutting bed in New Zealand and is able to handle fabric rolls up to 3200mm wide. The bed is in excess of 25sqm and features a series of automated feeding controls to ensure maximum efficiency. The controlled laser-cutting solution is recognised as the most advanced method of cutting textiles and incredibly the cutting point never touches the fabric. The overhead projection controlled remotely when required ensures the most accurate cut possible. We have no limitation on fabrics meaning we are able to process whatever you throw at us.

We have the largest finishing team in the country running our state-of-the-art finishing equipment (source from Europe). We boast a suite of finishing machines, including fully automated sewing machines through to more manual specialised equipment, to allow us to service our client's needs in the dye-sublimated graphic production. This choice allows us to ensure the highest quality and flexible solutions when finishing and manipulating the dye-sublimated textile imagery.

Across our finishing team and machinery we are able to collectively sew 818 lineal meters per hour in house. The skillset within the finishing team has been built up around our customer's requirements and ranges from standard product with astronomical quantities through to small run bespoke items that are manufactured under contract.

We use our machines to ensure that we achieve consistency within our finishing and to achieve undeviating high-quality flat seams, curved seams and correct positioning. This reduces production time so our finishing team can spend more time on working on collaborated bespoke projects where more smarts are needed.

life of a flag

Longevity - There are many variables which affect and therefore determine how long a flag may last. The expected life will also differ across styles of flags. If all due care is taken, a flag can be expected to last many months. However, they have lasted less than three months on occasions, having been damaged by severe conditions, or by hitting against a roof or a wall during flying.

A Street Flag, by their nature and design, will have a much shorter life span than any other flag product.

It is advisable to use TA717 or TA700 (heat sealed) for extended life when purchasing a Street Flag or a Custom Flag that may be left out 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

TA099 (double sided block out) is ideal for periodic events, indoor and outdoor. TA099 is not suitable for Custom Flags, Street Flags or Swing Arm Banners (used outside).

It is important to manage your clients' expectations of the longevity of their flag. This time frame will vary across the range of flags that are available to you.

Fabric Choices - TA700 and TA717 flag fabric will outlast TA065 flags, due to its unique lock-knit construction. TA099 (double sided block out) is a better option for events rather than frequent point of sale usage, as long term exposure to Ultra Violet rays (UV) can affect the fabric.

TA065 flags are ideal for Cosmic flags and have great durability and the best longevity due to no 'fly-edge' (as is apparent on WindBlade Flags). TA065 fabric is also suitable for Swing Arm flags (such as for Real Estate Agents) where usage is more occasional.

Ultra Violet - water based dyes are used in the printing process and this means that Ultra Violet (UV) rays affect the flags quicker than some other print processes. Some colours will deteriorate quicker than others. UV rays and high winds cause the breakdown of fibres in flags, particularly around the extremities and sewn edges. As light does not 'illuminate' the back of double sided flags, the impression is that UV affects double sided flags quicker. We suggest avoiding solid background colours (such as black) as these are known to fade faster than other colours. We are continuing to research improved UV protection on all fabric options - so you can be assured you are getting the best option available.

Wind - Prevailing conditions will largely determine the longevity or the life of a flag. A flag that is flown in extreme conditions will not last as long as a flag flown in more temperate climates.

Fly Freely - To increase the life of your flag, ensure that it flies freely. It should not be impeded by surrounding structures. It is important that it is properly attached to the pole so that it does not wrap itself around it repeatedly. If you wish to maximise its life, bring it in each evening and in bad weather. Note, flags are not designed to be secured by all four corners.

Colour Matching - PMS colours are advised should you require colour-matching. While Digital Printing gives you the best chance to achieve colour accuracy, it is not always possible to achieve an 'exact' match therefore we always recommend an A4 pre-production proof.

Care - Expect accelerated deterioration of flags used close to coastal conditions.

The life of a flag also depends upon its flying time. A flag that is flown constantly (24 hours per day, seven days a week), cannot be expected to last as long as a flag flown during the day and then brought in in the evening or in extreme weather conditions. It must be recognised that the flying time of a constantly flying flag is more than doubled, thus its life is considerably reduced.

Print Methods - Both Digitally Printed and Screen Printed methods are available. Pricing is based on the size, quantity and number of colours within the artwork. Please contact to us to discuss the best solution for you.

file specifications

Accepted File Types - We only accept PDF, EPS & AI file types. Where possible please save these files from Adobe Illustrator. We no longer accept CDR file types. If you are working from CorelDraw please save your artwork file as a PDF. Occasionally there can be issues when opening or importing files generated across different platforms or software packages, so be aware that if you're working with other software such as Flexisign or similar there is a small chance errors may arise. The most common will be 'Unknown shading types' or 'Nonnative artwork' which can produce undesired results when being read or parsed back into Adobe Illustrator.

Visual Proof - Please supply us with a flattened visual of your artwork. This is used for quality control purposes and allows us to visually cross reference this with the artwork you've supplied. You can either save your artwork as a JPEG or take a screenshot. We cannot proceed without this.

Fonts - We have an extensive font library but we ask that you outline all fonts within your artwork file, if necessary please provide the font with the artwork file.

Common Faults - Please ensure your file does not contain any overprints or spot whites.

Templates - Using the correct template is crucial, each one of our templates are uniquely designed to suit its product. Carefully read the template title and ensure you have the one that matches the product you are purchasing. Artwork in incorrect templates will be returned to you for re-supply. If you are unsure which template to use simply call our friendly sales team who will guide you towards the correct one.

Colour Matching - We can only accept PMS numbers for colour matching, please select from the Pantone+ Solid Coated or Uncoated colour books. Alternatively if we have supplied you with a fabric colour chart, please select your colours from this chart and notify us when submitting your artwork. We cannot use a CMYK mix as the sublimation process alters how each colour appears across different substrates. We can accept CMYK mixes selected from our fabric chart only.

Resolution & Image Quality - Please ensure your images are of printable quality. We recommend a minimum of 150dpi when at full size and at 10% scale 1000dpi to 1500dpi max. Please embed your imagery into the artwork file, if you believe this may severely affect the file handling and cause performance issues then please link the files and supply the links. Final production quality will reflect the artwork you have supplied.

File Size - Single files should not exceed 1gb (1024mb). Files still need to be workable, if your machines are struggling to process the file there is a good chance ours will too. Some things which can blow out files sizes are inflated image resolutions which may need to be down sampled. Hidden layers can also hold data when saving or exporting and should be deleted prior to saving. Delete any unnecessary, duplicated or unused imagery from your file. Excessive file size may incur additional processing charges.

Fabric Proof - We provide you with a FREE A4 fabric proof of your artwork for you to check, to give a clear indication of what to expect from the finished product. The proof gives you the opportunity to check your images, colour selections, text and fabric choices before the job is produced and allows for any alterations to be made. In over 90% of the cases where an issue was discovered it was found at the A4 proof stage.

Scale - Please work at full size. If your creative is larger than 5000mm in either width or height, then please work at 10% scale. Reason being you don't need a calculator to work out the conversion from full size to 10%.
